

Contributors

FILOMENO V. AGUILAR JR. is professor in the Department of History, Ateneo de Manila University, Loyola Heights, Quezon City, 1108 Philippines. He was director of the Ateneo's Institute of Philippine Culture from 2003 to 2005. His research interests include colonial sugar economies, sugar workers' cosmologies, global migrations, class formation, and political cultures. He taught previously in Singapore and Australia.

OONA THOMMES PAREDES is currently a Ph.D. candidate in Anthropology at the School of Human Evolution and Social Change, Arizona State University, P.O. Box 872402, Tempe, AZ 85287-2402, USA. She is a former graduate research fellow of the U.S. National Science Foundation, and a native of Medina, Misamis Oriental.

CHRISTL KESSLER is senior research fellow at the Arnold Bergstraesser Institute for socio-cultural research, Windausstr. 16, D-79110 Freiburg, Germany. She studied political science, sociology, and psychology at the Free University of Berlin and received her Ph.D. in Political Science from the Albert Ludwigs University in Freiburg, Germany. Her research interests include political relevance of religion, democratization, migration, gender, and sustainable development. She was a Visiting Research Associate at the Ateneo's Institute of Philippine Culture in 2003.

KATHARINE L. WIEGELE is assistant professor in the Department of Anthropology, Northern Illinois University, DeKalb, IL 60115, USA. She received her Ph.D. degree in sociocultural anthropology from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign in 2002. In 1988 she served as a Peace Corps Volunteer in the Philippines, and since then lived in the country for nearly four years, in Pangasinan, Batangas, Laguna, and Metro Manila. She is the author of Investing in Miracles: El Shaddai and the Transformation of Popular Catholicism in the Philippines (2005).