CONTRIBUTORS

LEONARD CASPER is a professor at the University of the Philippines. He holds his doctorate from the University of Wisconsin, has taught at Cornell and has held a fellowship at Stanford. He has contributed to various critical and literary journals. The June 1955 issue of PHILIPPINE STUDIES (Vol. 3, p. 223) carried a review by Father Bernad of Dr. Casper's Six Filipino Poets. The present article is written partly in agreement with, partly in reply to, that review.

JORGE R. COQUIA is a University of the Philippines' Law Graduate and holds his LL.D. from Catholic University, Washington, D.C.. He is now connected with the Solicitor General's office. He is author of the published dissertation Legal Status of the Church in the Philippines.

REV. J. EUGENE POIRIER, S.J. hopes soon to publish a book on Economics. He is at present pursuing theological studies at Bellarmine College, Baguio City.

REV. RICHARD J. CRONIN, S.J. was formerly on the staffs of the Ateneo de Cagayan and the Ateneo de Davao. He is at present at Woodstock College, Woodstock, Md.

REV. VICENTE MARASIGAN, S.J. formerly of the Manila Observatory staff is now professor of Physics at San Jose Seminary, Quezon City. Father Marasigan made his scientific studies at Fordham University and Georgetown Observatory.

REV. MIGUEL A. BERNAD, S.J. is Chairman of the department of literature and language at the Ateneo de Manila. He has contributed many literary articles to this quarterly of which he is associate editor. This is his third Shakespearean study.

REV. RALPH B. GEHRING, S.J. holds a doctorate in philosophy from Louvain University. He is professor of philosophy at San Jose Seminary, Quezon City, and at Berchmans College, Cebu City. The present article is a sequel to a previous one on John Dewey, which appeared in the September issue (Vol. 3, p. 275).

REV. JOSEPH I. STOFFEL, S.J. combines long experience in the classroom with even longer experience in parish administration. He is at present parish priest of Talisayan, Oriental Misamis, and in charge of Mount Carmel High School in that town.
