

Contributors

FLORANGEL ROSARIO-BRAID, director of the Asian Institute of Journalism, was also a member of the Constitutional Commission. She obtained her Ph.D. in Communications from Syracuse University and has written articles in the field of communications and development.

DONALD CHAPUT's article was presented at the International Mining History Conference, 27-30 August 1985. He is curator of history at the Natural History Museum, Los Angeles and is particularly interested in mining and military history.

REGALADO TROTA JOSE, JR. is a researcher for the Arts at the Ayala Museum in Makati. He is an avid student of colonial Philippine Church art.

JAMES H. KROEGER, M.M. is professor of Mission Studies and Islamics at the Regional Major Seminary in Davao. He finished his doctoral studies in Rome and has published his dissertation on The Philippine Church and Evangelization: 1965-1984.

RUURDJE LAARHOVEN finished her M.A. in Anthropology from the Ateneo de Manila University. She did research in the Netherlands, Hawaii and U.S.A., and is presently doing research at the Australian National University.

BRENDAN LOVETT, S.S.C. finished postgraduate studies in Linguistic Analysis and Approaches in Theology in Germany. He is currently connected with the interdiocesan seminaries of Dipolog, Ozamiz, Pagadian, Iligan and Marawi.

SOLEDAD S. REYES, is professor in the English Department, Ateneo de Manila University. She obtained her Ph.D. in Philippine Studies in the University of the Philippines, and an M.A. in Sociology in Literature from the University of Sussex.

LUCIANO P.R. SANTIAGO is a psychiatrist in private practice at Medical City General Hospital, Mandaluyong. He has published articles in psychiatry and Philippine history.