

Contributors

EDILBERTO N. ALEGRE is a poet, and has degrees in Science, English and Japanese Language and Literature from the University of the Philippines and Kyoto University. He is presently with the UP Asian Center, and is finishing a Ph.D. in Philippine Studies. He is co-author of the book The Writer and His Milieu (Manila, 1984).

DONALD CHAPUT is curator of history, Natural History Museum, Los Angeles. He is particularly interested in mining and military history, and is continuing research on the role of mining personnel in the resistance movements in the Philippines.

MARILOU PALABRICA-COSTELLO is associate professor in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology and research associate in the Research Institute for Mindanao Culture, Xavier University.

MICHAEL A. COSTELLO is associate professor in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology and research associate in the Research Institute for Mindanao Culture, Xavier University.

VINCENT CULLEN, S.J., is assigned to the Diocesan Retreat Center in Malaybalay, Bukidnon and has many years of parish experience in the area. BENJAMIN GRAY, a native of Candon, Ilocos Sur, was for years editor of Bannawag in Manila. During the war he was with the 121st Infantry USA-FIPNL and has many memories about the men involved in the guerilla movement in Northern Luzon.

RENE B. JAVELLANA, S.J., teaches theology and a course on Philippine Arts at the Ateneo de Manila University. He has an M.A. in Theology from the Loyola School of Theology and is currently pursuing an M.A. in Art History in the University of the Philippines.

RODERICH PTAK is a Chinese scholar at the Chinese University of Hong Kong with the International Asian Studies Program. He has a Ph.D. in Chinese Literature, and an M.A. in Economics from the University of Canada.

LUCIANO P.R. SANTIAGO is psychiatrist in private practice at the Medical City General Hospital, Mandaluyong, Metro Manila. He has published several articles in psychiatry and various aspects of Philippine history and culture.

JOHN N. SCHUMACHER, S.J., noted historian and author, holds a doctorate from Georgetown University. He has published widely both here and abroad in Philippine history.